Computers Predict Clear Majority

By Alvin Shuster

LONDON, Friday, Oct. 11 (NYT).—The governing Labor party led by Prime Minister Harold Wilson appeared this morning to be on the verge of victory in Britain's general elec-

With more than two-thirds of the votes counted, Labor had taken seat after seat from the opposition Conservatives and seemed to be virtually assured of a working majority in the 635seat House of Commons.

Computers predicted an overall lead for Labor of about 10 seats in the Commons, after previously forecasting a margin appoaching 30. The forecast oscillated throughout the early hours and further shifts were possible.

The projected outcoms would end the parliamentary uncertainty arising from the indecisive election in February, when Labor returned to power as Britain's first minority government in more than 40 years. Voters then left the balance of power in the Commons in the hands of Liberals and other smaller parties. [Returns from 381 of 635 parliamentary districts, with the net changes in seats, were: Conservative 143 Loss 11 230 Gain 12 Labor

"I think we shall have a small overall majority," Mr. Wilson said at 1:45 am. 'I think we shall be able to form a new ad-

But Conservative opposition leader Edward Heath refused to concede defeat. "It's much too early to tell," he said in a television interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

Leaders Re-elected All three party leaders were re-elected. Mr. Wilson won in Huyton with almost the same majority as the one he obtained in February. Mr. Heath was re-elected in Sidcup, and Jeremy Thorpe, Liberal chieftain, retained his North Devon seat. Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan and Home Sec-retary Roy Jenkins were also returned, as was Industry Secretary Anthony Wedgwood Benn. Social Services Minister Barbara Castle and Joan Lestor, parliamentary secretary of state in the Foreign Office, also were re-elect-Labor party defectors Christopher Mayhew, who joined the Liberals, and Dick Tayerne, a minority party candidate, both

The forecasts announced by the television networks were based on questions to voters in key districts as they emerged from the polling stations. The first results of the polling, however, were inconclusive.

Fewer than 30 million voters went to the polls in a turnout that fell short of the 79 per cent in February. A low turnout traditionally favors the Conservatives but, if the predictions are right, it did not help this time. Mr. Wilson called the election in an effort to win an absolute majority in the Commons and end the parliamentary uncertainty arising from the inconclusiva results seven months ago.

In the February election, the Labor party won 37.2 per cent, their lowest share of the vote since 1931; the Conservatives, 38.1; the Liberals, 19.3 and others 5.4. Although the Tories captured a larger share of the popular vote then, Labor emerged with more seats and Mr. Wilson went to 10 Downing Street.

Nearly 2,200 Candidates Nearly 2,200 candidates fought for the seats in yesterday's voting, which started at 7 a.m. and ended at 10 p.m. The last public opinion poll, conducted by the Opinion Research Center and published in the Evening Standard, gave Labor a lead of 7.4 per cent, more than enough to end the parliamentary deadlock.

The Labor party went into the election with 298 seats in the Commons, 20 short of a majority.

White House Deputy Press Secretary John Hushen said, "The maintenance of law and order in Boston is the job first of city authorities and secondly of state authorities."

Mayor Kevin White said today that he would not cooperate with any new school integration plans imtil the federal government provided assistance in guaranteeing the safety of schoolchildren. Mr. White said that the gov-

School officials are scheduled to submit a second phase of the plan to the courts in December. More Evicted As Squatters On West Bank

TEL AVIV, Oct. 10 (UPI).-Army troops evicted dozens of religious Jewish squatters from the occupied West Bank of Jordan today in a dispute that has spread to Premier Yltzhak Ra-bin'e coalition cabinet.

Dissension in the government over the squatters' demands oc-curred on the eve of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger'e visit to Israel Saturday night. Mr. Kissinger will hold two meetings with government leaders, the Foreign Ministry said.

Troops sealed off an area near Jericho and rounded np about 100 squatters who had been in the Ein Oil region since Tuesday night, reports said. About 500 squatters were evicted from other West Bank areas yesterday.

No Official Comment

The military command and anthorities of the West Bank military government declined to comment on the situation.

The leftist Mapam party in Mr. Rabin's coalition said that unless the ruling Labor party took stricter measures against the squatters and forced the National Religious party to cease support-ing the illegal settlers it would not vote for the religious party's entry into the government.

The religious party bowed to Mapam's demands and said that although it supported the squatters in principle, it could not agree with their bid to set up settlements not authorized by the government.

The religious party did not join Mr. Rabin's government in June, but its Central Committee since has voted to become part of the coalition. The move would strangthen Mr. Rabin by boosting his power from a majority of one to a majority of 11 in the Knesset.

Mr. Rumor resigned his centerleft coalition government last Thursday with his Christian Democratic party and the Socialists in a dispute on remedies for the nation's sinking economy.

As the government crisis entered its second week, the car manufacturer Fiat put 71,000 of its 100,000 antomobile workers on a reduced work schedule. In Zurich, Hans Mast, econo mist for the Swiss Credit Bank, commended the President for allowing fiscal policy to carry an increasing burden in the fight against inflation.

On this point there was general agreement elsewhere, too, that the President had done the right thing. Tight money and high interes, rates had been deployed as the main anti-inflation weapone, heightening fears that a shortage of money, in the United States as well as Europe, would cause a further rise in bankruptoles and unemployment.

In response to some easing of monetary restraint policies, interest rates have been falling. This trend continued in reaction to the President's message.

Additional Cuts

Mr. Mast said that he would have preferred to see additional cuts in U.S. expenditures rather then a readjustment of the tax burden, which in his analysis could have an inflationary im-

He reasoned that, in raising the taxes of the rich and middle classes, as proposed by the President, the program would, in effect take money out of savings, which was marginal income that richer persons put in the bank. Mr. Nessen added that the President continues to favor the immediate phaseout of foreign olldepletion allowances.

A Clarification The President's new position, which Mr. Nessen called a clari-fication," came after protests from congressmen from oil-pro-ducing states. Asked whether there were "complaints," Mr. Nessen said with a smile: "Some people called up to find out what

e actually said."
What Mr. Ford said at his new conference yesterday, when asked if the oil-depletion allowance should be phased out, was: "The answer is yes."

Mr. Nessen at one point during a wide-ranging briefing today called that answer "imprecise." He added that there was "no basic change in the administration's position."

Mr. Ford's answer yesterday came in response to a follow-up question asking him to clarify the difference between his support for a House Ways and Means tax-reform package which would phase out oil-depletion allowances—and the testi-mony of Treasury Fecretary Wil-liam Simon favoring them.

Mr. Ford's position, as stated by Mr. Nessen, puts his views close to those of major oil company representatives, who have long argued for decontrol. Some oflmen have said that decontrol, accompanied by an end to depletion allowances, would have the dual effect of dampening demand and increasing production.

Pardon Seen Influencing Cover-Up Jury

By George Lardner Jr. WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (WP) -Prosecutors are becoming increasingly worried over the prospect of getting a jury at the Watergate cover-up trial that might balk at the thought of

Now the only way prosecutors can keep such prospects off the jury is through the exercise of peremptory challenges. They have only six of these. Mr. Jaworski hinted at the government's problem yesterday in voicing fears that lawyers for the five defendants may yet wind up "an unwarranted advantage" in the selection of a jury. The special prosecutor asked

Judge Sirica to offset that possibility by changing his plans for the final stage of jury selection when peremptory challenges are to be exercised.

Before this, defense lawyers had been contending that they could not get an impartial jury hecause of publicity about the Watergate case. But this week, they have been emerging from each day's sessions with broader and broader smiles. The reactions to the Nixon pardon appear to have brightened their mood.

Now in its second week, the wrangling over a jury may end the exercise of the peremptory challenges by both prosecutors and defense la yers.

While the prosecutors have been allocated six such challenges, the five cover-up defendants HR. Haldsman, John Ehrlich-man, John Mitchell, Robert Mardian and Kenneth Parkinsonhave been given a total of 15

Mr. Jaworski complained that under present plans, the names of the prospective jurors who have survived closed-door mestioning will be called up in a fixed order. In addition, the prosecutor said, defense iswyers will be able to save most of their challenges until the end, after the government has used up its half dozen. "For example." Mr. Jaworski said in a memo to Judge Sirica, "If it is obvious to the defense that a number of jurors among the first panel of 12 are jurors who have expressed rather firm opinions that it would be unfair to prosecute these defendants in light of Mr. Nixon's pardon, the defense can reserve some of its challenges while in effect compelling the government to exercise challenges in the early

After that, Mr. Jaworski said, the defense would have "nearly total control over the makeup of the jury."

The prosecutor asked Judge Sirica to require defense lawyers to exercise two or three challenges for each one the government uses up, instead of letting them hold the challenges in

"This is an extraordinary case in which extraordinary measures to insure fairness to all parties are fully justified." Mr. Jaworski said. At present, he complained, the number of challenges allocated to the defense, "coupled with the pattern of responses about the Nixon pardon during closed-door questioning, raises "a possibility of unfairness to the government.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (WP).

Polish Communist party leader Edward Gierek revealed yesterday that his country plans to import $1.5 billion worth of U.S. industrial plants, equipment and technological know-how in the next few years.

The Polish leader also expressed approval of East-West détente and the hope that the Soviet-American dialogue would produce further weighty agreements." In New York today, at the UN General Assembly, Mr. Glerek called for a collective security system in Europe and a zone of peace in the Baltic, and endorsed a Soviet proposal for an Asian collective security system.

He said "political and military confrontation imposed by the im-

The economic "joint statement" was of special importance to Poland, which is beavily com-mitted to modernizing its industry with large injections of Western technology. The comtries declared that trade between them—which is running at about $700 million a year—will reach $1 billion by 1976 and $2 billion by 1980,

The 1980 goal is expected to make Poland the third largest Communist trading partner of the United States, behind the Soviet Union and China. This year U.S. trade with Russia and China is expected to reach about $1.2 bil-

Soviet Union provides about 95 per cent of Poland's petroleum at rates cheaper than those charged for oil from the Middle East. However, Warsaw will have to negotiate a new petroleum agreement with Moscow for the period through 1980, which could require greater reliance on Middle East sources. Political discussions between the two leaders included a review of Poland's position as one of the four members of the International Commission of Control and Supervision, which supervises the 1973 Vietnam cease-fire agreement. The Polish leader was understood to have told Mr. Ford that his government supports the cease-fire agreement.

Mr. Glerek was questioned on the possibility of withdrawal of all foreign troops from Europe. About 30,000 Soviet troops are estimated to be stationed in "One day this will happen," Mr. Gierek said. "We all wish it. . . but as long as we don't trust ome another, and as long as we don't create the conditions for such mutual confidence, one has to strive toward that objective in a reasonable and moderate way, so we wouldn't do something that would freeze negotiations for many years,"

NEW DELHI, Oct, 10 (NYT) --Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. worried about food shortages and conomic drift, drastically overhauled the nation's cabinet today.

Mrs. Gandhi's cabinet shifts involved such key ministries as Defense, Food, Finance and Home Affairs. The cabinet restruitiethe most dramatic in years—underlined the anxiety in the capital about the nation's scant food supplies, the record inflationary spiral, urban tensions because of shortages and India's erratic agricultural and industrial produc-

Commentators and politicians were divided about the impact of the cabinet shifts. One columnist here said that the cabinet moves were "merely a game of musical chairs" designed to create the impression that the government was tackling the current crisis. In fact, said the critic, the cabinet was comprised of "the same tired faces" but carrying different portfolios.

Other commentators and politicians, however, saw Mrs. Gandhi's moves as an effort to place pragmatic figures in key positions and to mute the ideologists that she has often sided with in the

Shift to Agriculture

Perhaps the most significant change involved Jagjivan Ram, a tough, politically powerful figure who has served as defense minister since 1970. Mr. Ram was shifted to the head of the Agriculture Ministry, and will there fore enact a pivotal role here in the next six months when the food and economic crisis is expected to deepen further.

Mr. Ram, who was born as an untouchable and has a following among these outcasts of Hindu society, was reportedly reluctant to take the agriculture post, According to reports, the 66-yearold politician relented after Mrs. Gandhi's repeated pleas that food and agricultural production were crucial problems facing India: Because of drought in northern

11 Reported Fined Greek Regime Is Accused Of Sharing Power With Junta

ATHENS, Oct. 10 (UPI).—Radithe first party leader to speak publicly after the end of martial law, today accused the government of sharing power with the military junta which had ruled Greece since 1967.

The 55-year-old U.S.-educated university professor also accused Premier Constantine Caramaniis of trying to restore the monarchy. Mr. Papandreou, who amount-ed today the merger of his Panhellenic Socialist Movement with the resistance organization Democratic Defense, said, "The gov-ernment shares its power with the junta, which has [President Phaidoni Cisicis as its symbol."

Democratic Defense is a group of liberal and leftist intellectuals which actively opposed the mili-tary dictatorship.

Speaking at a news conference attended by hundreds of cheering routhful supporters Mr. Papandreou said he did not fear the possibility of another coup. Mr. Papandreon said the Greek economy was ruined hecause the junta, which took power after a coup in April, 1967, "sold the country to foreign monopolies and encouraged the formation of rasitic middle class."

rising rapidly, but no one knows exactly how much or where. The sudden ballooning of Arab oil funds seems to have incited a kind of anxiety which, when one thinks about it, lies very moch at odds with the American tradition. Americans ought to be the last people in the world to object to investment across national boundaries, for America has done more of it than any other nation. The United States has benefited the people of other countries in the process, but it has also very much benefited itself. Now that the process is also running the other way, a hostile political reaction is beginning to be visible here and there in America. That reaction is mistaken. America's interest continnes to lie in the free flow of international

But that principle does not require Amerscans to remain in ignorance regarding the nature of foreign ownership in the United

Some of it, obviously, involves control of resources. We are heginning to hear murmurs that the United States must not permit its irreplaceable natural resources to go to foreigners—a remark that usually refers to coal shipments. It is an opinion that will be read with interest by Canadians and Venezuelans, whose oil industries are almost entirely owned by Americans and organized largely to feed the U.S. market. Those misguided persons who wish to discourage coal exports to Japan may wish to consider the effects of other countries applying the same principle to America—as, for a time, the Arabs did with the memorable oil embargo last winter. The occasional filckers of indignation at foreign real estate purchases-most recently, Kuwait's purchase of Kiawah, an Island on the South Carolina coast, for resort development-needs to be balanced by Foreign investment in the United States is reflection on the vast American holdings of mines, industrial plants and plantations abroad.

> Because foreign investment in the United States has been very small over the years, the government has never bothered to gather accurate statistics on it. There is no legal requirement to report the foreign take-over of an American company and no reliable way to identify foreign owners. The administration estimates foreign direct investment which means investment carrying control of the enterprise-at a total of about $16 billion, although some economists put the figure much higher. In contrast, American direct investment abroad runs to more than $100 billion. Bot even those countries that most welcome American companies keep much better track of who owns what than the United States does. Good information is hecoming essential not only for making sound public policy, but as an antidote to the exaggerated apprehensions that each large foreign investment sets off.

Sen. Daniel Inouve, D-Hawati, chairman of the Senate Foreign Commerce Subcommittee, began to get interested in the subject after a wave of Japanese investment in Hawaiian land and resorts. He drew up a thoroughly sensible bill directing the Treasury and Commerce Departments to carry out a comprehensive count of foreign investment in the United States His counterpart in the House, John Culver, D-Iowa, who had picked up reports of foreign purchases of Midwestern farmland, supported the bill. It has now passed both houses and awaits only minor reconciliation of the two versions before going to the President. There is no great cause for alarm in the current wave of business investment from abroad. But there is a case for the careful and accurate reporting that the Inouye-Culver bill will

THE WASHINGTON POST.

Sharing the Burden

President Ford was notably unresponsive in his replies to two questions at his news conference Wednesday as to why he was seeking a corporate and personal income surtax when many if not most economists agree that the country is not suffering primarily from a demand-push inflation. He was similarly vague as to why he describes infiation in "apocalyptic" language but shies away from gasoline rationing or a stiff tax on gasoline or petroleum imports.

In striving to answer these questions at his news conference, Mr. Ford had to contend with an inherently insurmountable difficulty. A clear analysis of inflation could only serve to emphasize the softness and the insufficient magnitudes of his 10-point program.

The President proposed the surtax presumably because he wanted to offset the cost of additional unemployment compensation, work relief projects, and modest tax reduction for the very poor. He quite rightly does not want a large deficit. The current inflation arises from several diverse sources, but a greater federal deficit would surely intensify it. However, since a serious slump is simultaneously beginning to develop, the critical consideration in devising a proper set of policles is how to restrain the inflationary forces without encouraging the recessionary

President Ford has not achieved the right mix partially because his magnitudes are too small. He is like a lifeguard who attempts to save a man 100 feet offshore by throwing him a 50-foot rope. Specifically, the tax relief for the poor is too modest to make any difference: the aid to housing is insufficient to revive that hard-hit industry; the public jobs for the unemployed are almost sure to

If the President were to bring sizable and effective help to these recession victims, he would need a much higger source of revenue than the surtax, which will provide only $5 billion. Furthermore, a drastic lowering of gasoline consumption and wastage would have a healthy effect on lowering the price of overseas oil, one major cause of inflation. Gas rationing on fairly liberal terms, a tax on automobile engine capacity, and a drive to make mass transit a readily available and strikingly cheap alternative to the private antomobile in every city would be effective means of bringing down American oil imports and prices and keeping them down.

In his address to Congress and in his news conference remarks, however, President Ford showed he is deeply reluctant to recommend the uncomfortable for fear it may prove to be the unpopular. This is almost certainly a misjudgment of the public mood. In any event, there is no doubt that soft answers and small programs cannot reach the source of the trouble.

Franco-American Thaw

The thaw in Franco-American relations, made necessary by the excessive polemics which in the end of Georges Pompidou's term had jeopardized the Jobert-Kissinger dialogue, has been seriously initiated since Valery Giscard d'Estaing's election. . . . The energy crisis and the economic upheavals which it entails without any doubt will be the major topic for the two Presidents. . . . A harmonizing of policies and strategies appears so indispensable for our industrial society on both sides of the Atlantic that It is difficult to imagine that the meeting of the two statesmen might end in discord. -From L'Aurore (Paris).

LONDON-Though so far no actual outbreak of hostilities in South Africa has yet occurred, it is no longer possible to deny that a state of war exists. The ultimatum issued by the Government of the South African Republic to the Government of Great Britain can only be regarded as a veiled declaration of war. South Africa demands that English trops be withdrawn from the Transvaal border; England of course refuses. The collision is inevitable and the tragedy is regrettable

Fifty Years Ago

WASHINGTON-Staggering through 12 innings of erratic but exciting baseball, the Washington Senators brought a world championship to the capital when they defeated the New York Giants by a score of 4 to 3. Their young manager, Bucky Harris, drove in three of the runs but the real hero and winning pitcher was old (36) Walter Johnson, who came on in the ninth in relief, pitched four scoreless innings, gave three hits, struck out five and held the McGrawmen until his team scored.

WASHINGTON.—Suppose President Johnson had made personal loans totaling $550,000 to an associate in public life, then appointed him chairman of a federal regulatory agency and written off the loans. When the facts became known, would leading senators and other weighty voices have said that there was nothing wrong in the arrange-ment—that it was just a way to keep a man of modest means in the public service?

Or suppose it were discovered that the transport workers union had secretly given half a million dollars to the head of a public agency dealing with transportstion. Or that General Motors had. Or an oil company. Would such Republican "liberals" as Jacob Javits and Hugh Scott rush to their defense? Would that crusty conservative, Sen. The immunity of Nelson Rockefeller from criticism or even serious scrutiny is an amazing phenomenon. He can do things that would cause an explosion if done by anyone else, and still keep Establishment opinion purr-

There must be an implicit assimption that a man as rich as Rockefeller, with so impressive a history of family philanthropy, will use his money in the public interest. We take him on trust.

Consider those huge loans to William J. Ronan, chairman of the New York-New Jersey Port Authority. Even if we grit our teeth and assume that the money was meant as mere kindly largesse, it surely had an effect. Do human beings receive $550,000 without feeling some special relationship to the source? Even generosity creates obligations.

And Ronan is in a much more powerful position than most federal agency heads. The Port Authority makes its decisions largely in secret, with little use of democratic control. It plays a crucial role in the planning and economics of the New York area specifically including the financial interests of the Rockefeller

WASHINGTON,-Before they W question President Ford, House Judiciary Committee members ought to look at an obscure clause in Article II, Section 2, of the Constitution. It says that the president may pardon "ex-cept in cases of impeachment."

That exception goes back to 17th-century England. In two cases that read like a preview of Watergate, the Crown was trol. The impeachment of the Duke of Buckingham under Charles I established the principle that, though the king could do no wrong, miscreant ministers could not avoid impeachment by pleading that they were merely carrying out his orders.

There still remained a loophole, and a second case closed it. The Earl of Danby tried to block his own impeachment with a pardon granted in advance by Charles II. The Commons refused to honor the pardon. It ruled that to permit "a pardon to be a bar to an impeachment" would defeat its purpose and thereby "the chief institution for the preservation of the government would be destroyed." The king could pardon after, but not before, an impeachment had been complet-

Our federal Constitution, and most state constitutions, go further and do not permit a pardon even after an impeachment. Did not Mr. Ford's perdon of Richard M. Nixon in advance of full investigation violate the spirit and purpose, if not the letter, of this ancient constitutional exception to the perdoning power?

Is it true then, that negotia-

large in scale to be seen by the Nor is it the use of money alone that seems to escape probing curiosity. Consider the massacre at Attice prison.

When Sen. Edward Kennedy seemed headed toward the Democratic presidential nomination in 1976, various newspapers and magazines began new investiga-tions of his role in the death at Chappequiddick, and properly so. But there were 39 deaths at At-tica, and Rockefeller's responsibility is right there, waiting to be scrutinized.

Silence

He refused to go to the prison when a visit by the governor might have averted tragedy. And then, when state police killed prisoners and hostages by shooting into the crowd, Rockefeller had nothing to say except to try to obscure what had happened. He has not yet acknowledged. much less criticized, the borror.
Of course prison rioters do not evoke much public sympathy. Nor should officials have to sympa-thize with them. But cold-blooded murder is something else. When a politician by his silence condones official murder, the calculation or cowardice that led him to that position must say something about his values. Is no one interested?

There are many other questions. Does no one care about his far-oot advocacy of military power, or his opposition to the nuclear test-ban treaty? Why has he never said a critical word about the war in Vietnam? How many fallout shelters has he built for himself?

President Ford, asked at his news conference about the gifts, suggested that Rockefeller had to be considered in a different way from other men because he is so very rich. Are editors and politicians and other shapers opinion going to accept that dangerous doctrine, and go on suspending their natural disbeller

Some Thoughts on Pardons

By L.F. Stone

Congress sought the full truth about Watergate by two modes of procedure, by impeachment and by a special prosecutor. Mr. Ford, like Mr. Nixon, has promised he would "not exercise his constitutional powers" to interfere with the special prosecutor, to quote the language of Leon Jaworski's mandate. The pardon frustrated the mandate insofar as full investigation of President Nixon's own complicity was concerned. Indeed had Mr. Ford not been stopped by public outcry he was ready with a general Watergate pardon. Its effect would have been to get rid of the special prosecutor's office

In a speech Mr. Ford made in 1963, he said that President Kennedy's assertion of executive privilege to hide the full truth about the Bay of Pigs was "akin to the divine right of kings."

The kings of England long ago lost any divine right of pardon. The royal pardon is no longer the result of a royal soliloguy with the royal conscience. Pardon in practice is granted by the home secretary with aid from the Court of Criminal Appeals.

Safeguard

A similar safeguard was adopted here. The encyclopedic. "American Jurisprudence" says that while the pardoning power of the president "is less re el than that of an English king. it has been seldom abused because ordinarily applications are required to be presented through or referred to the Department

Mr. Ford as a lawyer must have had this safeguard in mind Rules Committee at his confirmaor criminal prosecution" of Mr. general, in my opinion, would be the controlling factor."

The attorney general has said that he was consulted neither on the pardon nor on the tapes agreement accompanying it which gave Mr. Nixon custody of the tapes and the right eventually to destroy them. Why did Mr. Ford avoid the regular channels? Was he afraid the attorney general might object to the pardon and the tapes agreement, perhaps as fresh steps in a continuing cover-

All things considered, then, it was hardly a surprise to find that the aesthetic provenance of this "Carmen" was much closer to Lincoln Center than the Place Boisidieu in Paris (l.e. the Opera Comique). Not only did Merrill stage the work, but he brought along his longtime Met collaborator, Robert O'Hearn, as design-er, so that while the Met itself has been playing lately with the ides of "Carmen" in its original opera comique form (with spoken dialogue, Strasbourg (and Mulhouse and Colmar) is serving up this quintessentially French work in a version that, in a larger model, would have been perfectly out, although his costumes were sometimes too rich, while Merrill's staging, although full of detail, leaned more in the direction of routine than in the direction of a rethinking that might have been expected on such an occasion. Let it also be said that. from a technical point of view, everything worked—and anyone who has experienced provincial Prench opera in the past will know what a change that means, Routine, yes, but professional

Some of the disappointment Cortez. She is beautiful enough to be the ideal Carmen, and her voice has the right rich darkness. but her interpretation was entirely in the operetta tradition, as superficial and obvious as the scornful cackle that provoked Don José to dispatch her with his somewhat too-shiny switchblade.

Gilbert Py made a stalwart and impassioned Jose, despite a tendency to push his quite ample voice too hard in dramatic passages, and José Van Dam, while not precisely cutting a flamboyant figure as Escamillo, used his darkly resonant bass-baritone to handsome effect. Jeannette Pilcu's Micaela was appealing, in the traditional mold, and Pierre Thau was an elegant Zuniga. The choral forces—with special note for the members of the Saint-Maurice children's chorus were well rehearsed and effectively used in the staging.

Another sign of the importance attached to the musical renaissance here is that the French recording firm of Erato, which already has issued a number of orchestral recordings with Lombard and the Strasbourg Philharmonic, has recorded this "Carmen" with virtually the same cast as the Strasbourg premiere, with the notable exception of Regine Crespin in the title part.

No Rationing From the beginning, the sources said, an element that was ruled out was any quantitative allocation, country by country, of supplies that the United States will allow to be shipped.

Nevertheless, it is understood that the guidelines will help both the United States and the grain shippers to avoid the embarrassment encountered last weekend when large contracts between two grain companies and the Soviet Union were canceled under White House pressure. The limited control system announced Monday stemmed from that action. It will require prior approval for sales of more than 50,000 tons of corn, wheat, sorghum, soybeans or soybean meal to any one country or total sales of more than 100,000 tons of those commodities to one country within a week.

· Tough Problem

Executives in the grain industry say that the government officials are tackling a difficult problem because of the very nature of their business.

Sales by individual companies are often made to foreign affillates, usually to be resold and frequently with the ultimate buyer in a different country of

Sales made to buyers in one country also are frequently switched before shipment, when trade conditions change there, to buyers in other countries.

The guidelines being shaped will allow the government to monitor the flow of grain through the time when such switches are made, officials said.

Libya Orders Exxon Closing

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (AP-DJ). -Exxon has been ordered to close down all of its oll production in Libya.

The closedown, ordered by the Libyan government, is a result of a dispute that developed between Erron and a unit of Italy's stateowned ENI over liquefied natural gas shipments. The closedown affects about 255,000 barrels a day of production, Exxon said.

Also apparently involved in the closedown are the smaller Libyan-operations of W. R. Grace & Co. and Atlantic Richfield, which have interests in the two major fields produced by Exxon. In 1973, Atlantic Richfield said its total Libyan production was 19,000 barrels a day. The government ordered Exxon to close down after it had stopped shipping liquefied natural gus to Italy. The shipments were halted because Italy's oil com-pany refused to take the gas after a dispute over priors. In-ventorics of the liquefied natural gas then backed up, and Exxon. had to close the plant.

An Erron official said the Libyan government then refused to let the company "flare" the gas that is associated with oil production In New York, Exxon said 1.5 per cent of its total worldwide crude oil supply is affected.

In all, the Libyan closedown involves 255,000 barrels of oil a day. Exxon said its share of that is 110,000 barrels a day. Almost all of its Libyan oil has been moving to Europe, Exxon

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

AGIP Finds Gas, Oil Near Milan

AGIP. Italy's state-owned oil group, found natural gas at Castrate Dadda, a village in the Padana Valley near Milan. AGIP says that traces of high quality oil also were found in the same area. It adds, however, that it cannot yet estimate the potential of the oil find. AGIP, a subsidiary of Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi, the state hydrocarbons group, says technicians estimated that the natural gas field would amount to several hillion cubic meters. Italy's consumption of natural gas last year totaled 18 billion cubic meters, most of it imported from the Soviet Union.

ITT, UAL Resume Avis Talks

Talks between UAL and International Telephone & Telegraph concerning a possible sale of ITT's 52-per-cent stock interest in Avis appear to be on again. UAL, parent company of United Airlines, last week approached TIT and made several bids to acquire TIT's Avis holdings, according to industry sources. ITT rejected the offers but said in a public statement that it would sell its Avis shares to "any responsible buyer, including UAL, at the same price and conditions which would be acceptable to holders of twothirds of the publicly held Avis shares." It could not be learned if any new hids had been made, but it is understood that they have resumed talking about Avis. FIT signed a consent decree in 1971 with the Justice Department under which it agreed to divest itself of its Avis holdings by last Sept. 21. The department has said it is studying the situation and will recom-mend to a federal court soon what action should be taken regarding Avis. As a possible alterna-tive to selling its Avis holdings, ITT has proposed selling TTT debentures convertible into the Avis shares it bolds. Spokesmen for both ITT and UAL confirmed that talks have resumed. Neither spokesman would elaborate.

Precious Metals Concern Formed

Merrill Lynch and Handy & Harman of New York and Samuel Montagu of London plan to form a jointly-owned precious metals company. Details are still being completed on the venture, called Metrill, Montagu, Handy & Harman which will act as a gold dealer for U.S. institutions, corporations and citizens after the government permits ownership of the precious metal. That move is expected to occur at the end of 1974. The joint venture concern will sell and buy gold through any of the 263 worldwide offices of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith. Montagu will provide the gold market expertise and will produce and trade bullion in the world markets for the new company. Handy & Harman will fabricate, assay, store and distribute the bullion bought and sold through the Merrill Lynch offices. Prices would be based on the level at which the metal trades on the London gold market

The Dow Jones industrial average gained 17.06 points to 648.08. The index climbed 28.39 points yesterday and about 1,340 shares advanced today compared to 260 declines.

Brokers said the rally started when adverse reaction to President Ford's economic proposals dried up yesterday and a wave of buying set in. They said this carried over into today, reinforced by encouraging signs of lowering interest rates.

Alan Shaw, vice-president at

Harris Upham & Co., said "The stage was technically set for a big rebound after the beavy losses of previous sessions."

Lawrence Lewis, Pershing & Co. vice-president, said he finds a "real turnaround feeling" in the market, "not just a rebound after being oversold." Some brokers said traders were also encouraged that the wholesale price index for September rose at its lowest pace in 11 months. The American Stock Exchange index closed up 1.87 to 66.91. The most active issue was Tara Treasury bills, however, fell sharply during the day, shead of tomorrow's regular weekly suc-tion. The auction is being held tomorrow because Monday is a bank holiday.

The Treasury has set an additional $200 million of bills for the auction, and next week it will also hold its regular monthly auction of one-year bills.

So, from an acute shortage less than two weeks ago the bill market will be running into an dle of next week.

Gains in yield ranged as far as 50 basis points in some is with the current series threemonth bill leading the market lower.

Conditions in the money market were fairly easy through most of the session, holding in the 10-per-cent area.

In Chicago, wheat and other grains closed on the quiet side in anticipation of the Agriculture Department's crop report. Prices for wheat were unchanged to 8 cents lower after higher levels earlier in the day. Active commercial demand put corn near its highest levels of the day at the close, up the 10 cent maximum

Oil Price Rises Called Simply Unmanageable

Mr. Burns sharply criticized the recent trend to look for ways to "recycle" the oil countries sur-plus revenues to those nations in need due to high oil cost. Escape from Reality'

"All the talk about recycling, in my opinion, is an escape from reality," he said "What re-cycling really means is piling debt on top of debt."

He said all nations must cut down on the use of oil to put pressure on world oil prices.

He told the committee that just as the oil producers have formed a cartel to control production the oil consuming nations must de-velop a "common policy." He added that there is growing recognition among consuming nations to develop such a policy, featuring conservation of energy and research on new energy

On another matter, Mr. Burns said that any further deterioration in U.S. crop prospects would be "very bad news for all of us concerned with the inflation problem." He made that com-ment after a prediction by Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., that the Agriculture Department's crop report doe later today would show further substantial declines in crop prospects.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (AP-DJ).-The Agriculture Department estimated today that the frost-damaged corn crop will to-tal 4,718 billion bushels based on Oct. 1 conditions.

The latest corn figure is down 277 million bushels, or 8 per cent, from the Sept. 1 forecast, and would be 926 million bushels, or 16 per cent, below last year's har-

The department also estimated a 4-per-cent decline in soybean prospects with the harvest now estimated at 1.262 billion bushels.

The new soybean figure is 15.53 million bushels below the September estimate and 304 million below 1973.

Total wheat production, drop-ping 1 per cent from th September estimate, now is calculated at a record 1.781 billion busbels.

Deepening Recession Said to Be Likely

Wall Street Skeptical About Ford Program

By Michael C. Jensen Many Wall Street professionals are skeptical about the President's economic proposals despite the sharp surge in stock prices yes-terday that prodoced the sixth highest one-day gain in the history of the New York Stock Exchange Many of the investment execntives and analysis say that the rally was caused by removal of uncertainty about the administration's economic stance, coupled with the prospect of lower interest rates and a fall-off in "sell"

But most Wall Streeters say they do not believe the President's program will solve the nation's economic woes, and some of them warned that a deepening recession is increasingly likely.

U.S. Inflation Dips Sharply During Month

Wholesale Price Rise Is Lowest in Year

By Peter Milius

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (WP).

—The U.S. inflation rate abruptly declined last month, with the government's wholesale price index inching op a microscopic 0.1 per cent, the lowest in nearly a year, the Labor Department said

Farm and wholesale food prices which had soared erratically in July and August, reversed and fell a seasonally-adjusted 1.9 per cent. And the thousands of other wholesale prices in the economy—all those in the nonfarm, non-food industrial sector -rose only 1 per cent, adjusted a large increase by long-term standards but less than half their rise in any other month since

The overall wholesale index was still a staggering 19.7 per cent above a year ago, and farm prices have turned back up since the sampling in mid-September.

Industry Prices Ease The apparent easing of inflation in the industrial sector was the most important item in the statistics for September. Indus-trial prices, which make up about two-thirds of the wholesale index, had been rising 2 per cent or more a month all year. Govern-ment economists had argued that this was mainly doe to the four-fold increase in world oil prices late last year and the predictable but huge opheaval in pent-up prices that came with the lifting government controls earlier this year. Government economists said that once these one-time-only factors worked their way through the economy the inflation rate would fall. Prices would not come down from their new high levels, bot the'r rate of further rise would diminish.

The September statistics lent some credence to that view. Fuel prices. up 63.8 per cent for the year, were down 0.9 per cent for the month. Metal and metal product prices, which had been rising at a rate of more than 3 per cent a month rose only 0.4 per cent in September.

Less Dramatie Gains

In industries where basic materials are converted into more finished products, prices did not subside quite that moch last month. Machinery and equipment prices did the most to force up the industrial average last month, rising an adjusted 1.9 per cent. In August, bowever, they went up 2.9 per cent. Chemicals went up 2.3 per cent last month, compared to 6.8 per cent the month before.

The index stood at 167.2, meaning that it took $167.20 to buy goods at wholesale that cost $100

Reviewed by Trumbull Higgins

MARTIN BLUMENSON is preeminently qualified—as a contemporary - military historian and as the author of several serious studies on the European Theater during World War IIto write this authorized biography. (The first volume of "The Patton Papers, covering the years 1885-1940, came out in 1972.) Mr. Blumeuson brings to this second volume the same sharp psychological insight into the inner turnoil of George Patton both as an ambitious, oldfashioned and courtly patriotic hero, as well as a profane, teactionary and violent egomaniac one who despised the Allies, dark-skinned races, poor discipline and slackers in about equal measure. In fact, Patton's ambivalence could at the same time condone the killing of prisoners and deplore the large-scale bombing of enemy civilians.

Patton's real achievement was to become probably the finest offensive general officer in an Army that originally was not distinguished by any particular desire or talent for combat. desire of takent to common Mr. Blumenson makes clear why Patton was protected by highly placed friends, such as Henry Stimson and Elsenhower (to whom Patton ironically refers to as Divine Destiny), from his many flascoes in tactless self-seeking publicity and in flagrant loss of self-cootrol Rapidly expanding the U.S. Army was desperate for an aggressive tank professional and an inspiring leader of men. At least, George Patton was not one of the boys, cautious glad-handers, who, to his puzzled fury, even in wartime continued to be promoted above him, regardless of the consequences at the hands of an equally contemptuous enemy.

Indeed, it is Patton's often acute and unexpectedly humorous characterizations of men that provide the freshest perceptions in this full-fledged Victorian-size biography. For example, Patton described Montgomery's able chief of staff, Francis De Guingand, as "very clever, but extremely ner-vous and continually twists his long, black, only hair into little pigtails about the size of a match." Or in a portrait as revealing of Patton's own prejudices as those of his subject he admiringly delineates Cardinal Spellman as "a very clever little Irishman . . anti-Roosevelt, anti-CiO, anti-Negro. Jew and English—quite a man " At the height of his own finest hour in the Ardennes, Patton wrote of his great rival Montgomery "Monty is a tired little fart. War requires the taking of risks and he won't take them."

One of the practical disadvantages of using a great many con-ventions is that the temptation to use one may be too strong even though simple, direct action could be better. If West had not had a convention available on the diagramed deal from the Spingold knockout teams here in July, he would perhaps have wound up more than 1,000 points better off.

After North bid one diamond and East made a take-out double, South showed chib length Two clubs in this position suggests at less; a six-card suit, and a hand ng the strength for a re-

At this point, a simple West player might simply jump to four hearts, expecting to find a double fit in the major suits. However, West was not sure that he wanted to play game, and not sure whether to play spades or hearts.

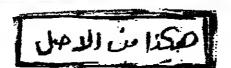

Accordingly, West brought a conventional device into play: A responsive double. This variety of take-out double usually applies only when the opponents have bid and raised a suit. Extending it to this situation was a partnership experiment of dubious value. The double gave North a cheap opportunity to support clubs. He might have hexitated to support clubs at the five-level over a jump to four hearts. As it was the jump to four hearts came from East, and South, having heard about club support from North, promptly bid five clubs. West's pass of five clubs was an invitation to his partner to continue, but East had bid enough already and simply doubled five clubs. Unfortunately, this contract was unbestable if the declarer made the right decisions in spades and diamonds.

So this year became a test of faith and baseball skill. The regular season broke like 1973's and this time the team fought off Cincinnati. But under the division system, the first 162 games only produce a tle for first place with three more games to place with three more games to be won against the winner of the other division. To fall short of that summit would have meant failure again for the Dodgers. But they took charge. Steve Garvey, 25-year-old former Michigan State football player who started the 1973 season as a pinch-hitter wound up this a pinch-hitter, wound up this year with the best season any Dodger first baseman had enjoyed since Gil Hodges was at his peak, Dave Lopes, 28, a 26th draft choice in 1968 who had apent five seasons in the minors, became the regular second base-man only last year. Bill Russell, 25, but in his sixth Dodger sea-son, established himself as a first-class shortstop after the retirement of Maury Wills. Ron Cey, 26, in only his second full major league season, gave the team solidity at third, which had been missing for years.

That was the infield. Joe Ferguson, 28, and Steve Yeager, 25, did the catching. Bill Buckner, 24, played left field and hit 314. Willie Crawford, 28, shared right field with Ferguson at times.

All those are home-grown Dodger system products, and the man most proud of them is Alex Campanis. Director of scouting when he came here with the club from Brooklyn, he then took over the minor league operation and is now in effect general manager with the title vice-president of

Oakland Puts Its Theory Into Practice and Comes Up With Victories

By Dave Anderson BALTIMORE, Oct. 10.-In a relaxed moment before yesterday's American League championship series ended, a prejudiced witness, Alvin Dark, was testifying why his Oakland A's play baseball so well. "One, pitching," the A's menager said. "Three tremendous starting pitchers in Catrish Hunter, Ken Holtzman and Vida Blue plus Rollie Fingers in the builpen. Two, a set man in each position who can do the job. Great defensively. No butchers. Three, they know how to score some kind of way and beat you some kind of way."

In the hours that followed, the A's proved Dark's theory, point hy point, in qualifying for the opportunity to win the World Series for the third consecutive year.

Hunter and Fingers collaborated to hold the Baltimore Orioles five hits. None of the A's made an error. They scored one run four walks in the fifth inning. And their only hit, a double high off the leftfield wall by Reggie Jackson in the seventh, produced the winning run in a 2-1 victory that assured their entry in the first World Series to be played entirely in California, a 400-mile commute on the Camino Real, the freeway constructed by the Spanish settlers there two centuries ago.

More Difficult Times

Next the A's will test Alvin Dark's theory in the World Series gainst two opponents—the Los Angeles Dodgers and History. Only the New York Yankees have won as many as three con-secutive World Series but in a variety of combinations because they actually won five in succession, 1949 through 1953, and four in a row, 1936 through 1939. But in those years, there were no divisions in each league, hence no championship series. Dark, again a prejudiced witness, believes that it's more difficult now to maintain a World

"You've got to do it twice now—in the playoff and then in the World Series itself," Dark said. "The more situations there are, the more difficult it is. You've got to win seven games now to win the World Series-three in the playoff, four in the series itself."

But if the A's are to win, they must accomplish it with what might be a semi-butcher in right field.

During the championship series, Reggie Jackson was the A's designated hitter. But in the World Series, the American League team is not permitted to use its designated hitter. It must comply with the National League's old-fashioned rule that the pitcher must bat for himself. Jackson has been bobbling on a pulled hamstring muscle in his right leg. As a designated hitter, he hobbled easily into second base yesterday when Don Baylor couldn't leap high enough against the leftfield wall. But in the World Series, he will be hobbling in right field where his slowness might sabotage the A's defense. But the A's are not about to surrender his hat for his glove. "I could only help," Jackson acknowledged as champagne trickled down his neck, "so I had to earn my money."

He is the A's highest salaried performer. He was awarded his request of $135,000 when he went to arbitration earlier this year.

"Eut don't worry, I'll play right field Saturday," he said, referring to the World Series opener. "I can run if I have to. I think the days off will belp me. I had a heating pad on it last night and I didn't sleep at all. I whirlpooled it before the game and then I wrapped it with two ace bandages from the calf to the top of the thigh. I didn't want to be part of a ballplayer. I'm making too much money for that. But that double gave me a feeling of contributing."

His home run, two doubles and a single helped the A's win the last two games of the World Series last year after the New York Mets had taken a 3-2 advantage in games.

But two years ago I cried like a baby when I couldn't play in the World Series because of a bad left leg. That was a lot worse than this one. I had a ruptured hamstring that time, stretched tendons and stretched ligaments. I'm beginning to think I'm going to have to examine the way I play the game. I'm the oldest 28 there is, I run around like I'm 49."

Takes Care of Himself

As he spoke, he was told that Charles O. Finley, the A's owner, had announced that the A's physician would check Jacksou's leg. "The doctor can't tell," Jackson said. "This isn't like a broken bone. He can't tell how much it's healed. I'm the only one who can tell and I know that I'll be playing."

"The last time the A's doctor looked at anybody," he was reminded, "it was Mike Andrews."

Reggie Jackson laughed. He remembered how Finley and the A's physician allegedly conspired to fabricate a back injury for Andrews in order to drop him from the World Series roster after he had made two errors in the A's loss to the Mets in the second

"I like that," Reggie Jackson said, smiling. That also is the A's way to play baseball.

Caps, Scouts Routed

Rough Debut for NHL Newcomers

NEW YORK, Oct. 10 (UPD .-For the Washington Caps and the Kansas City Scouts, it was welcome to the National Hockey League.

The Caps and Scouts, the NHL's newest arrivals in what is fast hecoming an annual ritual of expansion by twee, got their expected rude debut in the world of major league hockey last night, losing by fairly one-sided scores to the New York Rangers and Toronto Maple Leafs, respectively.

For a while, it looked like the Caps might pull off an upset by downing the Rangers at Madison Square Garden, Jim Hrycuik shocked the capacity New York crowd by heating the Rangers' Ed Glacomin after 5 minutes 6 seconds of the first period to give the Caps a 1-0 lead.

And then after the Rangers' Greg Polis tied the game 37 seconds later, Washington added another shocker by going ahead 2-1 on Ron Anderson's goal at 9:32 of the second period. However, that was that, as the Rangers scored five of the game's next six goals to post a 6-3 victory. As for the Scouts, they, too, ran into some serious trouble late in the game, with Toronto scoring four goals in the final period to run off with a 6-2 decision.

Elsewhere on the NHL's opening night, Montreal had to score twice in the final period to salvage a 5-5 tie with the New York Islanders; Detroit edged Chicago 2-1; Pittsburgh downed Minnenia, 4-4, and Vancouver and Atlanta skated to a 3-3 tie.

from St. Louis, and rookie Rick Middleton each scored twice for the Rangers, which had to make coach Emile Francis smile on opening night—even though there are some 80-odd games left in the regular season plus a good many in the ever-expanding playoffs.

Darryl Sittler, Ian Turnbull and Dave Keon all scored in the third period to break the Scouts' first-night halloon. For Keon, it was the 250th goal of his career.

Canada's Goalie Says Team Was 'Bugged' in Soviet Union

Catcher Elrod Hendricks had the same gripe about some of the calls, but he was willing to give the umpire the benefit of the TORONTO, Oct. 10 (UPI) .--Team Canada goaltender Gerry The background is terrible out Cheevers says several Canadian there and the shadows came in early. The Russians bugged some of the rooms with listening devices, probably to find out our strategy and how we would play them." Cheevers said he discovered a small transmitter in the dresser League last night got some more bad news when the league's best franchise had two-thirds of its drawer of his room. "It had wires in it so I sang some Canadian songs, then ripped it apart," he said.

Gordie Howe and Mike Walton also found listening devices hidden in their rooms, Cheevers said. And I think some of the other players did, too, Walton taught the Soviets tha beauties of the English language when he detect-ed the transmitter. I don't think they'll play that tape back in

The Canadians think the Rus-sians were able to learn their strategy for the sixth game of the series—the second played in Moscow-with the listening devices, Cheevers said. Prior to that game, the Canadians held a strategy meeting in a room on the 16th floor of the Russija Hotel Coach Bill Earris noted during the meeting that the Rustelevision clowns, congressional candidates and almost everybody else who craves attention these days. Elegance in waging an assault makes it more deadly in a civilized way, whereas bluster and billingsgate degrade the cause in which it is made.

After Pearl Harbor Winston Churchill sent the following words to the Japanese ambas-

"In view of these wanton acts of unprovoked aggression committed in flagrant violation of international law and particularly of Article I of the Third Hague Convention relative to the opening of hostilities, to which both Japan and the United Kingdom are parties. His Majesty's Ambassador ot Tokyo has been instructed to inform the Imperial Japanese Government in the name of His Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom that a state of war exists between our two countries.

"I have the honor to be, with high consideration,

Your obedient servant, "Winston S. Churchill."

Some people, Churchill recalled. did not like this ceremonial style. "But after all," he said, "when you have to kill a man it costs nothing to be polite."

Cinching arguments by crying "male chauvinist plg." is not only not elegance but also a gratuitous abuse of sus scrojo, a harmless and useful beast of considerable animal intelligence who is peither for nor against the feminist movement so far as anyone

AMERICA CALLING

NEW YORK—I have been sad-dened recently by receipt of anything but elegance. "Chauvinism," according to the American Heritage Dictionary, means "militant and boastful devotion to and glorification of one's country; fanatical patriotism." used in the feminist battle cry, chanymist" is inclegantly stripped of its meaning and used as a meaningless modifier, presumably because it trips smoothly on the tongue and is fun to say.

> The decline of elegance seems to correspond with the decline of regard for the language, of which the perversion of "chauvinist" is an example. It would be unfair, however, to suggest that the feminists are in any way to blame for the present love of barbarisms which is turning English into a blunt instrument. The feminists have merely been contaminated by the plague. It is not surprising that they resort to ear-grinders like "eexism" and "consciousness raising" to express perfectly sound ideas, for they live in a national hubbub in which the language is mostly compounded of grit (expletives deleted). bombast 1 Muhammad Ali) and nonsense (most of what is heard on television). Not long ago, I heard a radio newsman announce that three convicts had "successfully escaped" jail. If he had elegance he would have explained how they might have unsuccessfully

The saddest news of all comes from Theodore Bernstein, one of the most careful anthorities on American usage. Bernstein now proposes that we give up trying to make the distinction between "who" and "whom," which none but the truly elegant can understand and which few of these could use correctly without fail.

Give up the struggle with "whom"? Come on, Bernstein, don't let the banner fall. It's only a short step from quitting on "whom" to agreeing that male pigs really can be militantly and boastfully devoted to their own country, which would put us all in the "sexist" position of ascribing fancier powers to male pigs than to their female counterparts -- "female counterparts" being the sort of inelegance you fall into when you are too bullied to say "their ladies."

How Digging Can Make You Feel Better

By Henry Mitchell

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10 (WP).—Gardening helps people get well and sometimes makes life worth living. So says one of England's leading authorities on therapy through plants, A.S. Smith, who has been in Washington the past two days as keynoter of the second annual meeting of the National Council for Therapy and Rehabilitation Through

Smith says people are forever coming to him and saying, "Well, look here, I've suffered a stroke. Can you recommend took that could help me keep on gardening?"

The Gardeners

That is what the gardeners say to him, at least when they have strokes and start worrying for the first time about how to get the roses pruned, the trises sprayed, and the seedbed for onions prepared.

But others, equally in need of help, say nothing when they are brought to him at Nuffield Orthopedic Hospital near London. "There was one fellow, just a little boy, from Sudan. He had to learn to use one hand. He couldn't speak English, and I only know two words in Arabic, 'stop' and 'go.' Goodness, he might as well have been a camel, as far as my being able

"Well, I got him going watering some plants with a hose that had a fine rose (sprinkler) at the end of it. When the pressure hits a certain point, the head falls off. When he got going, we turned the pressure to that point, the head shot off, and he grabbed it. He didn't know he could do that, and it was critically important to him to work that hand before

Gardening as therapy, for the ills of body and mind, is nothing particularly new, the authorities point out. Physicians have been prescribing garden work for its fresh air, regular moderate exercise, for centuries. Voltaire knew, and said, there is nothing like growing cabbages to straighten you out, and as immemorial wisdom has it, gardening was Adam's therapy long after it was first his joy.

Various educational centers-Michigan State University and Clemson College among them-have long been working in the field. The august Royal Horticultural Society ran an article about such therapy more than 20 years ago. After World War II anything that would help the paraplegics or severely war-wounded was seized upon, and sometimes gardening helped.

A Pulling Together

The national council is simply a pulling together of the isolated individuals and institutions who have been working

You never remind petients what they can't do," Smith said. "They know that. For instance, an old gentleman with recovery problems after hip surgery where, let us say, he must stand for a time and then sit for a time.

I don't take him out and say, Now let's see, you can't stand up very long, what in the world shall we find for you to do.' No, I say, 'Here are all these herbs that need harvesting, could you yet that job done for us? Just cut them all down, then tie them in bundles like this."

The man starts, and the task naturally requires him to stand and then sit, stand, then sit. In this way he helps his body recover, without feeling demeaned or bored either, and he is still his own man. Therapy through horticulture works something like that, though clearly different approaches are needed with paraplegics (they can learn to use ingenious trowels for digging) or retarded children—as one of the latter once observed, after he became a sort of gardener, "I used to be retarded, myself."

Smith talked yesterday, between committee meetings and

"Yes, of course I do like to be with people and they do respond. My boss said-and I guess I am the first horticultural researcher in the British health department, all the rest are involved in medicine-my boss now said back then: 'If a man is going to try to treat my patients with this horticulture therapy, by God I want to see some sunshine coming out his eyes."

The Problems

Qualifying admirably in that respect, Smith went from challenge to challenge, but first he spent several years examining the problems of using plants to help the sick.

The combination of garden experiness, shrewd observation of patients, and great experience in seeing how they react to different forms of therapy, has caused some of his patients to regard Smith as "some kind of faith healer."

As many of the 200 who attended the conference could testify, you can hardly overestimate the importance of a new interest to a sick person who may, after all, be giving up tennis

According to Marcia Headrick and Patsy Pierce, who teach greenhouse operation and floral arrangements to 600 women prisoners in the Texas prison system, it is a great thing for them to learn a new skill. Unfortunately when they get out of prison they cannot find jobs in the work they have learned, because usually they don't have the money to wait while working themselves into such a job. They have to est, so they get what they can, perhaps a job as a waltress, and then things pile up and they never get started. But Miss Headrick hopes a way will be found-a sort of halfway house-to ease them into eardening work.

Once a doctor told Smith, "Here, take this woman out and work her in the garden. Hard. So when she comes back to me she can tell me where she really hurts."

This was by no means a heartless thing, Smith said. Often a patient becomes engrossed with his gardening, and all the cobwebs of the too-active brain, too-active pitying emotions, are for a time cleared away, and the person is for a time a lively, simple animal. He then knows where the bodily pain is, and his account is free of at least some of its former neurotic

Or, to put it more plainly, there is nothing like digging to clear up the brain. Gardeners, it is often observed, always think
